Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions, which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm will master catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. All druggists sell the 50 cent size. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

The Balm is used without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation.

Wanted a Bargain.

One day a small Cincinnati boy came to a halt before a sign over a desk in the office of the express company. It gave the rate for money orders, and after studying it for a few minutes he walked up to the cashier and said boldly:

"How large a one, my boy?" the clerk inquired benignantly.

"Well, let's see," pondered the little fellow. "The rate for a ten dollar order is 8 cents, isn't it?"

"Well, I want a drum and pair of roller skates and a new straw hat and some candy. Ten dollars will be enough."

Then he fished through his pockets and triumphantly placed a nickel and three coppers before the astonished clerk. It took ten minutes to convince the youngster that nothing less than $10.08 could buy a money order for $10.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Didn't Give Him a Chance.

"Say, ma," piped up little Johnny after the minister had finished his call and taken his departure, "when Mr. Meeker was here every time you stopped talkin' a minute he would start in to say somethin' an' git as fur every time as 'I dare say,' an' then you would start goin' ag'in an' talk a lot more, an' that is the way it kept on right along, an' the only thing he said all the time he was here was 'I dare say,' 'I dare say,' every few minutes."

"Well, what of it? I am not to blame for Mr. Meeker's paucity of ideas, am I?" demanded Johnny's mother, somewhat impatiently.

"I dunno 'bout that," said Johnny doubtfully, as if not exactly sure what was meant by paucity of ideas, "but anyhow, ma, you orter give him a chanst. When he started in with 'I dare say,' why didn't you keep quiet jest once, ma, an' let him go ahead an' say what he was goin' to an' have it over with?"—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

A Chapel on a Bridge.

At St. Ives, the little old Huntingdonshire town in which Oliver Cromwell lived for several years, there is a bridge spanning the lazily flowing Ouse, and on this bridge is a quaint building which at one time did duty as a chapel. The structure has been in existence for something like 500 years and was, according to local historians, originally employed as a beacon lighthouse. After that it was turned for a time into a hostel and eventually became an ordinary dwelling house. Some of the rooms in this curious building are below the level of the water in the river.

"You know that box of cigars you gave me on my birthday, dear?" said a man to his wife.

"Yes."

"I'm awfully sorry."

"So am I—for the thief!" was the cruel remark.

An Outsider.

Suitor—Your daughter, sir—well, er—that is—she told me to come to you—she says you— Pater—Quite so—I understand. Let's see, are you Mr. Bronson or Mr. Wibbles? Suitor—Why, I'm Mr. Hotchkiss!—Cleveland Leader.

Her Odd Way.

Giles—My wife is a queer woman. Miles—Indeed! Giles—Yes. Why, when she has occasion to drive a tack she uses a hammer instead of a hairbrush.—Chicago News.

[Original.]

Once upon a time a family, consisting of a young man, his wife and two little children, lived in a cabin near a pottery in England. The wife did the cooking, took care of the home and the children, while the husband worked in the pottery. Edmond Spier was not a very good workman. He was rather inclined to study processes for saving labor or of producing new and useful articles.

His wife, who was a practical woman, had to bear her share of her husband's handicap. She often argued with him as to the futility of dreaming about new processes none of which he had the ability to invent and being thus drawn from hard work which might advance his wages and render the family more comfortable. But it is impossible to change people's dispositions, and Molly Spier at last gave up trying to change that of her husband.

Meanwhile there was no addition to the comforts of the home. The larder was no better, the furniture was getting more shabby, and the children were ragged. What with the cooking, the housework and the patching of clothes Molly Spier was having a hard time of it. But with all her practicability her amiable disposition could no more be changed than could her husband's proclivity to dream. But one day Edmond came home from the factory with a burning fever on him, and it was evident that he was in for a protracted illness.

There were no unions in those days to take care of a man when he was ill, and the Spier family suffered greatly. Molly Spier got odd jobs to do, which helped to keep them from starving. Edmond applied to his employer for help. The pottery owner was a cold, calculating business man and replied that if he began to pay wages to one of his men while ill he would end in having to pay all under similar circumstances. This killed all hope of obtaining anything from that direction.

One day Molly spent what money she had on hand for some fresh pork. Having bought more of it than she could use in a short time because it was cheap, she determined to cure a part of it. Putting some salt in a common cooking vessel such as was used in those days, an unglazed porous affair, she filled it with water and set it on the stove to heat. Then she went out to attend to another matter.

Edmond, who was now convalescent, was in the only other room in the cabin spending his time, as usual, day dreaming. He began by inventing in imagination a vessel hard glazed like glass, a substance that no water could penetrate and neither heat nor cold crack. Having invented this imaginary vessel, he proceeded to sell his invention for a fabulous sum, build a house, dress his wife in silks and satins and the children in equally fine apparel. He heard something sizzling in the kitchen, and it occurred to him that he should go in there and see what was wrong and correct it. But at that moment he was figuring up his fortune, and the matter passed out of his mind.

He was still dreaming when he heard Molly go into the kitchen and utter an exclamation of impatience. Then she came into where Edmond was lying, holding an empty saucepan, and for once since his illness lost her equanimity.

"All the salt I had is gone," she said. "I put it on a hot fire with water, which boiled over. Besides, just look at the saucepan. There's something on the outside that won't be rubbed off. The pan is spoiled for looks if not for use. I do think you might have gone into the kitchen and prevented the damage."

Edmond took the saucepan in his hand and examined it. Where the salt and water had boiled over the vessel was glazed. He scratched it with his nail without effect. He took out his pocketknife and tried to scrape it off, all to no purpose.

"Molly," he said, "you've made us rich."

She turned away with an expression of impatience. He got up and hid the saucepan under the bedclothes. Then, with a step so strong that his wife looked at him with amazement, he went out and bought on credit a bag of salt. Before he went to bed that night he had roughly glazed every cooking vessel in the cabin.

The next day he broke up one of the vessels and took a piece to the owner of the pottery. "How did you do it?" asked the potter. "That's my secret," Edmond replied. "What do you want for your secret?" "A third interest in your pottery."

Time passed, during which the potter submitted the glazing to scientists, offering a large sum to any one who would tell him how it had been effected. But none of them could tell. Only Edmond and Molly Spier knew, and Molly proved that a woman can keep a secret. Besides, Edmond convinced her of its value. Weeks passed, during which hunger still made its abode in their cabin. Edmond was offered a large sum for his secret. He declined. Then he was offered a quarter interest in the pottery. But he held firm, and Molly at last caught the infection of his confidence till his terms were complied with on condition that it prove practicable and not too expensive.

The dreamer's dream was realized. Only he had nothing to do with the invention. It was Molly's. From a cabin the Spier family removed to a commodious dwelling and afterward to a palace. Molly Spier was indeed dressed in silk and satins, and the children were brought up in luxury.

ELINOR I. BOYD.

ON THE WAY TO THE BLOCK.

[Original.]

One day some two and a half centuries ago the Lady Arabella Boyle, borne in her "chair" by a couple of menials on the Strand in London, was stopped at Temple Bar, the way being narrow, by a small party on foot. The lady put her head out of the chair window to learn the cause of the delay. She saw a prisoner in charge of guards.

A sudden thought struck the Lady Arabella.

"Whither are you going?" she asked of the officer of the guard.

"To Tyburn, may it please your ladyship."

"What to do?"

"To cut off this man's head."

"And supposing it pleases me to marry him?"

"You'll have a husband without a head."

"That's just the kind of husband I want, and none other."

She bade her lackeys set down the chair and sent one of them to fetch a clergyman. In a few minutes he returned with one, and, the prisoner consenting, the knot was tied. Then the procession moved on to Tyburn, and the Lady Arabella proceeded on her way much pleased with the adventure. Though but twenty-two years old, she was heels over head in debt, and at that time there was a law in England that when a woman married she was absolved from all she owed. In the course of half an hour she would be a widow, having got rid of both husband and debt.

But fate decreed that the delay of the marriage should save the prisoner's life. When he was kneeling before the block at Tyburn and the executioner was about to raise his ax a horseman was seen coming like the wind holding aloft a paper. The ax was stayed till the messenger arrived, and the paper proved to be an order to suspend the execution and commit the prisoner to the Tower.

A week later London was in ecstasy over the return of King Charles II., and all persons imprisoned on account of loyalty to him were released. Alexander Yeoman, the son of a country squire, walked out of the Tower with no yoke upon his shoulders except the yoke of matrimony, which he had no desire to throw off. The vision of beauty that had come down from heaven, it seemed, while he was on the way to Tyburn was not forgotten by him. For political reasons his reprieve was not published. His wife immediately after her wedding and supposed widowhood sought solace in Paris, where she proceeded to plunge again into debt in the gayeties of the French capital. She returned some time after the accession of the new king and entirely ignorant of the fact that she was a married woman.

One evening at a ball at the palace the king sought her and said: "I desire to present to you one of my gentlemen in waiting. He is more to you than any other man, for he has given you absolution, though you have given him life. Can you guess who he is?"

"Absolution comes only from heaven, your majesty, and if I have given him life I must be his mother."

The king laughed and directed Alexander Yeoman to be brought to him. When he arrived he stood before the beautiful Arabella a young man scarcely older than herself.

"If this is my son," she said to the king, "I must have borne him in my babyhood."

"You have met before," said the king. "Do you not remember his face?"

The lady looked at Yeoman curiously. "No," she said at last. "I do not remember ever to have seen him before."

"That may be because when we met I had suffered from a long distemper," said Yeoman, "and was sore distressed."

"And what distressed you?"

"Faith," said the king, "he was nearing corruption."

"Your majesty is speaking in riddles," said Arabella.

"Rather put it," said Yeoman, "that I was granted a glimpse of heaven before I was to become food for worms."

"A truce to this talk," said the lady, "and tell me where we have met."

"Never mind that," said the king, "at least for the present. The gentleman, having been a stanch supporter of his rightful king, deserves his reward. Alexander Yeoman, kneel! Now arise, Sir Alexander Yeoman," and the king, drawing his sword, rested it on the young man's shoulder. "I have an estate for you in Surrey," he continued, "taken from a notorious Roundhead, an estate valued at £200,000. I would provide you with a wife, but the Lady Arabella has forestalled me in that. Lady Arabella Yeoman, this is your husband, whom you married on his way to Tyburn, condemned to be executed for fidelity to his king. He was reprieved and at our restoration to the throne set free."

Lady Arabella was not long in recovering from her astonishment. "Was ever such luck!" she exclaimed. "I meet a man about to lose his head who lifts me out of debt. I meet him again with that head on his shoulders, and he brings me a fortune."

The marriage turned out to be a very happy one. The wife became a domestic woman, though she and her husband were high in favor at court. So long as King Charles lived he never tired of rewarding Sir Alexander Yeoman for so nearly giving his life to his sovereign, while the husband never forgot that his marriage on the way to the block saved his life.

HIS TURN CAME.

The Way the Liquor Man Got Even With the Bank Teller.

Many years ago there lived in Rutland, Vt., two men who bore the same name, which name we will call W. O. Jones. One of these men was a dapper young bank teller; the other was engaged in running a cigar store with a saloon attachment in the rear. This was in the days of prohibition in Vermont. Every three or four weeks the latter Jones would be haled into the police court and fined for liquor selling, which was chronicled regularly in the daily papers. The bank teller grew nervous about it, and one morning this announcement appeared: "W. O. Jones, the popular young bank teller of the Rutland National bank, wishes it to be understood that he is in no way connected with the saloon keeper and hopes their names may not be confounded."

Now, it transpired that a few months afterward this young teller failed to appear one morning at his accustomed window at the bank. Upon a hasty examination it was found that $15,000 or more of the funds of the bank had also disappeared. The wires were called into requisition immediately, and after a few days he was located in Denver. It was the old story. He was brought back, incarcerated, tried, etc.

It was now the saloon keeper's turn, and this notice was duly published in the same paper that issued the previous one: "W. O. Jones, the widely known business man of Merchants' row, wishes it to be understood that he is in no way connected with W. O. Jones, the defaulting bank teller now in jail, and hopes their names may not be confounded."—Exchange.

THE TURNED UP MUSTACHE.

It Originated In Spain at the Court of Philip IV.

The German emperor, William II., is generally regarded as the inventor of the turned up mustache. This is true only as far as introducing it as a fashion. It was invented at the court of Philip IV., about 1625. That monarch was the first to wear his mustache turned upward. From the Spanish court the fashion spread over all Europe. Charles I. of England, Philip's brother-in-law, and many members of the Austrian Hapsburgs adopted it. It came to Belgium and was introduced into Germany by the Spanish soldiers during the Thirty Years' war.

It was also found in Sweden as well as in France under Louis XIII. Under Louis XIV. the beard went out of fashion, and during the time of Rococo the elegant world knew only clean shaven faces until the French revolution brought the mustache again into use. But nowhere except in its Spanish home did the mustache rise so extravagantly as with the German emperor and his imitators.

In Spain all kinds of artificial means, such as bandages and coverings, were employed to compel the mustache to keep this unnatural upward position, and in looking at the paintings of Velasquez or Murillo one can easily understand that without such coercive measures a true full blooded Spaniard could never have realized his ideal mustaches.—Minneapolis Journal.

In the House of Commons.

In the days of Burke, Pitt and Fox members of the house of commons used to relieve the tedium of debate by sucking oranges and cracking nuts while lying full length on the benches, and Brougham made his great six hours' speech on law reform in 1828 with a hatful of oranges by his side for refreshment. Joseph Hume found solace in pears, which he took from his bulging pockets and munched by the hour, leaning the while against his favorite post. No wonder oranges were so popular, since their vender (one of them, at any rate) was a picturesque girl who used to sit with her wares in the lobby, attired in a "sprigged muslin gown with a gauze neckerchief" or in the glory of "clean white silk stockings, Turkey leather shoes and pink silk petticoat, becomingly short."—Westminster Gazette.

The Tarantula.

Whether the tarantula is ever a death dealer or not is a disputed point. However, there seems to be no doubt that the bite of this spider-like creature inflicts one of the most painful wounds that the human body can endure. Stolid Indians who have borne the tortures of the sun dance without flinching have been known to roll upon the ground and shriek in agony when bitten by a tarantula, which leaves a livid scar that never grows dim. It is possible that the tarantula bite sometimes proves fatal, although it is difficult to find a well authenticated instance of this kind.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Even Buds Grow Old.

According to a government botanist at Washington, there is reason to believe that buds share in the growing old of the parent plant. He illustrates his meaning in this way: Suppose the average life of an individual plant—say a tree—to be 100 years; then a bud removed when the parent plant is fifty years old will also be virtually fifty years of age and if transplanted by grafting will be able to live on the graft only fifty years more.

When Invention Supercedes

THE inventions which curtail employment for men continue to menace us and the very word manufacture will soon be a travesty. The hands of men for making commodities are being dispensed with and the brains of our inventors seem to work toward the doing away of labor. In the long run it is evident that the cost of production being lessened the consumer will benefit, but the present producers or workers, not looking upon themselves as consumers to be benefitted, feel injured by the inroads of mechanical devices which deprive them of a means of livelihood. It behooves the workingman to be versatile that he may turn his hand to new work, for at any time some genius is liable to perfect a patent which will supercede him in the shops and factories, in the fields and in the offices of the commercial world. Not only is the hand which is guided by brain and backed up by physical strength menaced but human intelligence itself, as is evidenced by the adding machine and kindred inventions. One brain—that of the inventor—puts thousands of hands and heads out of employment.

The hop-picking device is being put into the hop yards and this invention is indeed almost to be lamented, for hop-picking of all labor has been a healthy, wholesome outing for thousands of men, women and children. We need not deplore the factory devices which turn human beings from the sweat shops to other lines of work where there are better surroundings and conditions, but hop-picking has seemed a harvest holiday—a summer's dream where they who worked reaped more than money.

A late invention is the girlless typewriter, or, in other words, machines run by electricity, and this may completely revolutionize office work. It is said to be an accurate worker, indifferent to cussing or call-downs, guaranteed to spend no time whatever in chewing gum, adjusting pomponades or harboring designs against the employer. On the other hand, it is coldly statuesque, neither is it pretty or petite, nor a soul thriller, yet it will supercede the human typewriter sooner or later, affecting the men who follow that work as well as women. Typewriting and office work has for many years been very popular with girls forced to make a living, but the coming generations will have to look to new lines of employment. There are many avenues being opened up to women workers and many of the old-time ones are calling strongly for followers. Among the latter are dressmaking and housework. We cannot imagine the invention of any machine which will keep house like mother used to, and yet it is spurned. The cause once lay with the employers, who thought too lightly of a service for which they believed it was easy to find good performers, but time has been demonstrating that good house workers are priceless treasures, with the result that employers are conceding much nowadays in the way of privileges and wages to servants. With the question of mongolian competition adjusted the field of household service promises much to the worker.

Dressmaking is a despised art among the majority of our daughters, who prefer to stand behind counters or take the abuse of telephone patrons rather than to fashion creations which some times brings from twelve to fifty dollars. With all the drug of ready-made clothing there is a constant demand for seamstresses and originality of design and detail. Hand-made fabrics command the highest prices on the market despite the rivalry of loom and lace-maker.

We have deplored the number of girls who have forsaken the time-honored callings of their kind, but competition with the machine on one hand and the finesse of human handiwork on the other should induce our women workers to fall into the ranks where invention can never supercede them.

The ease and cheapness with which work can be done will ultimately benefit us all and the whims and new demands of a progressive, prosperous people will keep both man and machine busy for ages to come. The doing away with primitive devices marks the progress of the race and the development of man along higher lines. As Henry Ward Beecher has said: "He that invents a machine augments the power of a man and the well-being of mankind."

The Superior Court Judgship.

Among the offices to be filled in this county at the election in November are two Judges of the Superior Court to succeed Judges Emmet Seawell and Thos. Denny. There a four aspirants already in the field who will seek the Judgship nomination in the Republican county convention, which will convene next month. These are Jos. P. Berry of Santa Rosa; F. A Cromwell, Petaluma; ex-District Attorney Pond, Santa Rosa, and Thomas Denny, incumbent, Petaluma.

Of the Democrats aspiring to judicial honors in this county we have heard but one name mentioned and that is Judge Seawell, whose friends desire him to succeed himself. All the aspirants are learned in the law and in every way fitted to preside in our courts with ability, dignity and fairness.

At this time it is too early in the campaign to make a political forecast as to whom will be the successful ones, but it is safe to assume that Jos. Berry will be one of the two nominees for Superior Judge on the Republican ticket and that Judge Emmet Seawell, who is the idol of his party, will be one of the two Democratic nominees.

Now is the time to get together and all pull together to make the dedication of Sonoma's New City Hall celebration on September 9th a success in every sense of the word. Put away your hammers and get out your horns. Then get busy and toot loud and long for the success of an event that will mark a new era in the town's progress.

Back From Mines.

Mr. Noe, who is interested with Frank Weaver, Dr. Thomson, Dr. Sprague and others in the placer claims in the Mt. Grant mining district, Esmeralda county, Nevada, is in town. He left for the mines a couple of months ago, and during his stay in camp lost twenty pounds. The high altitude of the placer claims which are nearly 10,000 feet above sea level, did not agree with Mr. Noe's health, hence his early return. He reports the mines as being very promising and when he left Frank Weaver was the only one of the owners on the ground.

Sign Language on the Curb.

Any one would imagine all the curb brokers in Broad street were mutes. They use the sign language down there now to convey quotations and sales to their office boys and clerks who sit in the windows of the offices to catch the quotations. As a matter of fact, some of the brokers use the deaf and dumb alphabet; others use a distinct signaling code of their own, known only to the one single house and its representative. Even this, however, has to be changed now and then. The brokers possess a nimble wit, and they soon learn the secret signs of their competitors.—New York Cor. Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Safest Way.

"My friends dragged me into this wretched affair," shiveringly said the first duelist to his adversary as the seconds approached with the deadly weapons. "I never pulled the trigger of a pistol in my life, so if I hit you it will be an accident."

"Nor is this awful duel to my liking," whined the challenger, white to the gills. "Like you, a pistol is a strange article to my hands, and if I shoot you it will be with a stray shot."

"Then, for heaven's sake," exclaimed the first duelist, with a ray of hope, "let's aim carefully at each other or one of us may get hit!"—Kansas City Newsbook.

Selwyn's Curious Taste.

George Selwyn had a strange but not uncommon passion for seeing dead bodies, especially those of his friends. He would go any distance to gratify this pursuit. Lord Holland was laid up very ill at Holland House shortly before his death. George Selwyn sent to ask how he was and whether he would like to see him. Lord Holland answered: "Oh, by all means! If I'm alive tomorrow I shall be delighted to see George, and I know that if I am dead he will be delighted to see me!"

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

LIVED HERE FORTY-NINE YEARS AGO.

Mr. and Mrs Hugh Fraser of San Francisco spent last Sunday in Sonoma and were guests at the McDonell home on Broadway. On the 20th inst. this worthy couple celebrated the fifty-fifth anniversary of their wedding at their home in the metropolis.

In a brief interview with Mr. Fraser a representative of the INDEX-TRIBUNE found him very affable and entertaining—a Scotchman of the old school and full of reminiscences. He first came to Sonoma in the year of 1859, and worked as a blacksmith for "Bill" Fleming and "Jim" Martin, the pioneer smithies of the town. The shop was located on the east side of the Plaza near where Poppe's store now stands. After remaining here for one year Mr. Fraser removed to San Francisco, where he has since resided, but during the sixties and seventies he frequently came to Sonoma to visit Angus McDonell.

Mr. Fraser has long been prominent in the metropolis as a man of affairs. In 1879 he was elected a member of the Board of Supervisors and was a member of that body when Mayor Kalloch was shot by Charley de Young. About thirty years ago he founded the Clan Fraser, which is to-day one of the foremost Scottish societies in the State.

During his brief stay here on Sunday Mr Fraser called on a few old-timers and he was pleased to note the many improvements in town and valley. He declared that things had materially changed here since his day. There were no railroads then and the chief means of travel was to sail up and down Sonoma creek on the old sloop "Gazelle," commanded by Capt. P. N. Stofen, who was well-known and popular with all. In those days the Sonoma plaza did not have a tree, shrub or building on it. Tony Oakes was the proprietor of the Union Hotel and was known far and wide as a host with no superior. Jerry Linehan, now living in San Francisco, was one of the biggest business men in the county and at that time owned among other things a livery stable here and many stage lines. The pioneer Nick Carriger had large vineyards, manufactured wines and was lord of the valley's western slope in those good old days. Our City Attorney, Robt. Poppe, was then wearing knee pants and a little straw hat with a ribbon on it and City Marshal Jim Albertson was the dude of the town and a veritable lady-killer.

Telephone Company Acquires Lines in Lake Co.

President Johnson of the Northwestern Electric Company has just completed a deal whereby his company absorbs the Clear Lake Telephone and Telegraph Company and all the property and lines of the Lakeport, Saratoga Springs and Ukiah Telephone and Telegraph Company. This deal gives Mr. Johnson's company control of all the local and long distance telephone lines in Lake county, if we except a few private lines of little or no consequence.

Last week President Johnson was here in consultation with local manager Jas. F. Tate in regard to some contemplated improvements in the service in this valley. From here he went to Lake county and in addition to closing the above deals up there installed a new exchange at Upper Lake and ordered an equipment for an exchange at Kelseyville.

Louis Lea, was arrested and tried before Judge Small in the Justices' Court, Monday, on complaint of J. Carolo, who charged the defendant with disturbing the peace. The evidence proved that Lea had thrown rocks upon the Carolo dwelling on Spain street but just for what purpose was not made clear by the evidence, but it annoyed Carolo nevertheless, hence the arrest. The Judge was convinced of the man's guilt and fined him $10, which was paid. The defendant was then discharged from custody by his honor, who bestowed upon the malefactor one of his characteristic sympathetic looks, thrown in, as it were, as a bonus to the fine.

MISTOOK THE GOATS FOR FEROCIOUS LIONS

Amateur Naturalists Take to Hills, and Thereby Hangs a "Tail."

James Modini, Carlos Emparan, Theo. Kiser, Paul Robin and Louis Byers, five well-known and popular young business men of this place, enjoyed an outing in the mountains several miles north of town last Sunday and Monday. They located their camp on the Norrbom ranch at the headwaters of Agua Caliente creek and then sailed in to have a good time. A hunt for big game in the mountain fastnesses was inaugurated the first day of their outing and while hiking through the deep canyons the party came suddenly upon what they supposed to be two ferocious California lions. A volley was fired in the direction of the beasts, which was followed by a wild retreat. Later on a council of war was held and a reconnoiting party was sent out to look over the battle ground. It then developed that instead of bearding the California lion in his den the mighty nimrods had slain two inoffensive nanny goats, belonging to a nearby mountain rancher.

The owner was hunted up and told to assess the damages. "Now these here goats," were valuable ones, "by gosh," and the boys were assessed $10, which was paid on the spot, each of the party of five planking up two bones to make up the ten-dollar pot.

It is now up to the boys to explain just how they came to mistake stubby-tailed goats for lions, whose caudal appendages are about a yard long.

A Theatrical Treat.

Frank Cooley and Gladys Kingsbury, whom we have read so much about, will appear at Union Hall three nights, commencing Monday, July 27th. The reportorie of the plays in which these well-known stars will take the leading roles, are entirely new, Mr. Cooley having secured such well-known successes as "Unwritten Law," "The Man from Mexico," "The Great Jewel Mystery," etc.

The company which is supporting the two favorites has been selected to play certain parts especially adapted to each, which help to make each play a finished production. Although the company is larger than usual and the plays are stronger yet seen with any reportorie company on the coast, the prices of admission will remain the same—15c, 25c and 35c. Seats on sale at Simmons' drug store.

We have at all times in stock a full assortment of up-to-date styles in sizes from 18 to 86, in low, medium and high bust. If we fit you once you will realize what true comfort is. Our business is more like a National Bank—it's strictly reliable every day in the year and the next year. Every article is priced at the smallest possible price consistent with legitimate merchandising, and that's no fairy tale.

Died From Cancer of the Breast.

Mrs Marie Berry died in Dr. Leix's sanitarium Monday of cancer of the breast. Mrs. Berry, who had been living near Vineburg the past few years, entered the sanitarium some time ago for treatment. The disease, however, had progressed too far to permit an operation to be performed and nothing could be done except to relieve the patient's sufferings until she passed away. The deceased leaves a husband but no children. She was a native of Borteaux, France, and aged 58 years. The remains were shipped to Oakland for interment, the funeral taking place in that city Thursday.

Missionery Workers.

Elder F. Brink of Michigan, assisted by Missionary J. R Reed of Alameda of the Seventh Day Adventist faith, will hold services nightly in a cozy tent which has been set up in the vacant lot on Napa street opposite the INDEX-TRIBUNE office. The initial service was held last evening, Elder Brink's subject being "Will the Book Stand." The subject to-night will be a new and interesting one.

The seats are free to all who desire to attend.

Death of Charles Ryland.

Charles Ryland of San Jose, a brother of C. T. Ryland of this place, died in San Antonio, Texas, Monday, where he was temporarily stopping for the benefit of his health. The deceased was a son of the late Senator Ryland, one of the foremost citizens of this State in his day. He was also a grandson of California's first Governor under American rule, Peter G. Burnett.

The remains were shipped from the Lone Star State to San Jose, where the funeral took place yesterday.

Democratic County Committee Meeting.

A meeting of the Democratic County Central Committee is called for this afternoon in Santa Rosa. A date will be set for the holding of a party primary election to select delegates to the Democratic county convention and for naming the time and place for holding the same.

Mass Meeting of Citizens

The Board of City Trustees have called a mass meeting of citizens to be held at the New City Hall next Monday evening at 8 o'clock to make arrangements for dedicating Sonoma's new hall of justice. The idea is to have the dedication ceremonies on Admission Day, to be followed by a big celebration.

Now is the time to lay concrete sidewalks. See Trudgen, the stone mason, about it.

A successful operation for cancer was performed upon Mrs. Sohn by Dr. Fred'k Leix last Monday. Mrs. Sohn came here last spring from Wisconsin to visit relatives and a short time ago entered the doctor's sanitarium for treatment when the presence of the cancer was discovered. At latest accounts the patient was getting along nicely.

Paul Mosner, the enterprising bicyle dealer, has had a fine cement sidewalk laid in front of his store building on Broadway. It is now up to one or two other property owners on that side of the street in the same block to do likewise. So far the following propty owners besides Mr. Mosner have put in stone curbing laid cement sidewalks the past few months: J. G. Marcy, F. Schweigert, H. F. Bates and J. J. Dunbar.

Fractured Shoulder.

Cesare Minelli, the well-known stone mason, fell from his bicycle Monday afternoon and fractured his right shoulder. Dr. Leix set the broken bone and expects to see his patient at work again in the course of five or six weeks.

"The Blood is The Life."

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are effected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood. Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It enriches and purifies the blood thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

◉ ◉ ◉ ◉ ◉ ◉

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

◉ ◉ ◉ ◉ ◉ ◉

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath.

Costly Jar of the Subway.

The tuppenny tube, London's subway, once set fire to a house in a manner so extraordinary as to merit attention. In a mansion beneath which runs the subterranean railway one of the bedroom fireplaces was fitted with a blower—a sheet of iron inside the grate which can be raised or lowered to regulate the draft. The blower rested on a series of iron notches. One afternoon a servant kindled a fire in the grate and when it was well alight raised the blower, so that the coal would burn but slowly, and so left it while she went downstairs. Presently, deep in the clay beneath the foundations of the house, a train rushed along. The vibrations from its passing were sufficient to jar the blower from the notches on which the servant had left it. It dropped down. The draft increased; the fire raged madly. The flames were enough to set the chimney on fire, burning soot set the water tank on the roof alight, and there resulted a considerable conflagration.—Pittsburg Post.

A Girl and a Snake.

It is a matter of fact that men have greater fear of serpents than have women. During a visit to friends in the country I was crossing a stretch of meadow in the company of my hostess' daughter, a sprightly girl of seventeen, when a black snake crossed the path ten feet in front of us. I caught my companion by the sleeve, but she wrenched herself loose, gathered her skirts about her knees, gave a running jump and landed squarely upon the back of the reptile. His snakeship thrashed the grass and the girl's ankles with equal futility. As soon as she could disengage one foot she planted it upon the serpent's head. In the absence of club or stones I was compelled to stand and witness a scene that to me was terrifying, but to the girl furnished supreme enjoyment. Years afterward when I read Haggard's description of Jess' fight with the kangaroo I understood the kind of entertainment that my young companion had provided for me.—Brooklyn Eagle.

There's a Hare In the Moon.

Equally famous with the man in the moon and the woman in the moon is the hare in the moon, says Garrett P. Serviss in his "Astronomy With the Naked Eye." The original is a Buddhist legend. The god Sakkria, disguised as a Brahman, pretended to be starving and went to the animals for help. The monkey got him a bunch of mangoes; the coot picked up a fisherman's neglected string for him; the fox stole him a pot of milk. At last the god approached the hare. "I have nothing but grass," said the hare, "and you can't eat that." "But your flesh is good," suggested the pretended Brahman. The hare assented. "Then," said the Brahman, "I'll kindle a fire at the foot of this rock, and you jump off into it. That'll save me the trouble of killing you." The hare assented again, but as he leaped from the rock the god caught him in his arms and then drew his figure in the moon as a perpetual reminder of the excellence of self sacrifice.

Cerebral Embolism.

Cerebral embolism, or the occlusion or plugging of an artery in the brain, causes sudden death. Growths or vegetations form on the valves of the heart. While attached they are harmless, but the instant one, large or small, becomes loosened and enters the rapid arterial current a very perilous condition obtains. The embolus, or plug, enters a vessel that becomes narrower and narrower and at last it is arrested and occludes or plugs the artery, thereby cutting off the blood supply. The force of the blood current back of the embolus keeps it at the seat of arrest. In brain cases the middle cerebral artery, at the base of the brain, is affected. Once lodged unconsciousness follows and soon death. Some of the symptoms resemble those of a true cerebral hemorrhage or apoplexy.—New York Herald.

A Quaint English Ceremony.

On the last day of each October the city solicitor of London, with an assistant, attends upon the royal remembrancer, when by proclamation "the tenants and occupiers of a piece of waste ground called the moors, in the county of Salop," are commanded to "come forth and do your service upon pain and peril that shall fall thereon." The solicitor chops in halves two fagots, one with a hatchet and the other with a billhook. Afterward comes the summons to the tenants, etc., of "a certain tenement with a forge" in the Strand and the payment of six horseshoes, with sixty-one shoe nails, by the solicitor. This forge has long ceased to be, and the same shoes and nails are used year after year, the shoes being at least two centuries old.

Spell This.

Some of you who think you are well up in spelling just try to spell the words in this little sentence:

"It is agreeable to witness the unparalleled ecstasy of two harassed peddlers endeavoring to gauge the symmetry of two peeled pears."

Read it over to your friends and see how many of them can spell every word correctly. The sentence contains some of the real puzzlers of the spelling book.

Too Good a Chance to Miss.

He (indignantly)—They have put us in a back pew this morning. Why, I wonder? She (calmly)—They probably noticed that I wore a dowdy hat and that I shouldn't care to have it seen!

There is a saying that people are as "homely as a mud fence." Did any one ever see a mud fence or know if there is such a thing?—Atchison Globe.

Can't Afford Him Now.

Lily Bell—No, Rufus. Ah cain't marry yo' jest yet awhile. Y'll hab to wait. Rufus—Why for mus' I wait, Lily Bell? Lily Bell—'Cause three of the families mammy washes for done quit her, an' now she sca'cely makes 'nough to support me an' paw.—Judge.

The Source Told All.

"What'd Jimmy give yer for yer birthday?"

"This here brass ring."

"How'd yer know it ain't nothin' but brass?"

"He give it ter me."—Cleveland Leader.

There are nettles everywhere but the smooth, green grasses are more common still.—Mrs. Browning.

THE BADGE OF HONESTY

The above illustration represents the several native medicinal plants which enter into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Stands Alone The one and only medicine for the cure of women's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, the ingredients of which are printed and placed upon every bottle wrapper leaving the great laboratory in Buffalo, N. Y., where it is made, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Stands Alone Not only in respect to its known composition, but also as the only specific advertised remedy for women's diseases which absolutely contains no alcohol.

It Stands Alone As the one medicine for women, the makers of which take their patients fully into their confidence and tell them exactly what they are taking. This Dr. Pierce can afford to do because his "Favorite Prescription" is made of such ingredients, and after a working formula that has thousands of cures to its credit—thus placing its merits above criticism.

It Stands Alone As nature's cure for the diseases peculiar to women, and is composed of Golden Seal root, Blue Cohosh root, Unicorn root, Black Cohosh root, Lady's Slipper root and chemically pure glycerine of proper strength, to extract and preserve the medicinal principles residing in the roots employed, for any length of time in any climate. It is scientifically prepared by experienced chemists and pharmacists at the laboratory of the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

In the early sixties it was usually the duty of a practicing physician to ride many miles every day on his regular round of visits upon his patients. In those days a young man who had received a careful medical training in one of the best colleges of that day was accustomed to ride ten, twenty and often thirty miles or more, visiting the sick and afflicted. His success was soon phenomenal. Doctors and families called him for consultation to towns at considerable distances by rail. He became especially noted in the cure of obstinate and distressing diseases of women. He had early discovered that by combining the extracts of certain native medicinal plants in just the right proportion, without the use of alcohol, his "Prescription" almost invariably cured such cases. Later, in order to place this remedy before the public in a shape easily to be procured, he established a laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., where regularly qualified chemists and pharmacists were put in charge to accurately prepare his "Prescription" and put it in shape for shipment. This remedy, which he named Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, is not a "patent medicine," but is a real prescription of a real physician in a real practice, and hence the name.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets These tiny, sugar-coated anti-bilious granules regulate Stomach, Liver and Bowels, cure Constipation and Bad Stomach, attended by foul breath. One or two for a laxative, three or four for a cathartic.

Flavoring Tobacco.

Nearly all tobaccos are doctored in various ways in order to suit the tastes of different consumers. Each manufacturer—even in Havana—has his own secret methods, handed down from father to son, which are regarded as perfectly legitimate and necessary in the preparation of the soothing weed. Saltpeter is added to the tobacco to make it burn well, licorice, honey, molasses and maple sugar to give sweetness to it for the special benefit of chewers and rum to make it keep well and preserve its properties. Nearly every plant which will afford a perfume is used in the preparation of what are known as "fancy" tobaccos. But it is not true, as some suppose, that opium and deleterious drugs are employed, save in a few brands of imported Turkish and Egyptian cigarettes. Among the flavors used are coffee, tea, valerian, lemon, orange, geranium, sassafras, thyme, anise, mint and cinnamon. Gum and glycerin are occasionally employed to bind the tobacco particles so that they shall not crumble into dust. The various ingredients are made into a kind of sauce, into which the tobacco leaves are dipped or with which they are sprinkled.—London Answers.

The Proper Adjective.

At the close of a revival service in Philadelphia the minister of the church went down the aisle, according to his custom, to greet the strangers in the congregation. "I don't think you are a member of our church," said he to one as he warmly shook his hand. "No, sir," replied the stranger. "Well, you will not think me unduly curious if I ask to what denomination you belong?" asked the minister. "I suppose," responded the other, "I'm really what you might call a submerged Presbyterian." "A submerged Presbyterian?" exclaimed the minister. "I should be glad if you would explain." "Well, I was brought up a Presbyterian, my wife is a Methodist, my eldest daughter is a Baptist, my son is the organist at a Unitarian church, my second daughter sings in an Episcopal choir, and my youngest goes to a Congregational Sunday school." "But," said the minister, aghast, "you contribute doubtless to some church?" "Yes; I contribute to all of them," was the answer. "That's what submerges me."

Crows and Strings.

It was proved centuries ago that a crow can count up to three and no more. I met a farmer once who said that his corn crop had not failed in twenty years owing to his habit of stringing his field. He explained: "No crow will enter an angle formed by two strings stretched on poles. I illustrated this to some friends several years ago by sowing a small field in corn for fodder, protecting it by a zigzag string running from one end to the other. Within the angles formed by the string not a blade of the young crop was touched, but close without them, at each end, the whole crop was demolished. A crow is a very wise fool, and this is an effective and cheap way of circumventing him."—New York Press.
